Never Alone commentary by Willie Recht

n June 12, 2016, I heard the news that Omar Mateen walked into Orlando's crowded Pulse nightclub and began shooting. Forty-nine dead. The deadliest mass shooting in the history of the United States. The shooter was upset after seeing two men kissing.

In 2017, advocates tracked that at least 29 deaths of transgender people in the United States due to fatal violence - the most ever recorded.

running through my head. I will be honest, I was scared to come to work on Monday morning, and I was scared to have my team come in. Can I promise to keep them safe? I

Or, for me and many in my dual-identity communities, "I am gay and I am Iewish. Does that mean I am twice as likely to be the victim of a hate crime?"

On October 27, 2018, I was at home with my husband and puppy (as we normally are on lazy Shabbat mornings) when I heard the news that Robert Bowers walked into the Tree of Life synagogue in Pittsburgh and began shooting. Eleven dead. The deadliest massacre of Jews in the history of the United States. The shooter yelled, "All Jews must die."

The murders that took place on Saturday morning remind me, again - still - that our joy at coming together with friends and loved ones and community, whether to shed the stresses of life on a Saturday night or to join in prayer and reflection on a day like the Sabbath - a holy day - is marred by questions: "Will I be safe here?" Or, for me and many in my dual-identity communities, "I am gay and I am Jewish. Does that mean I am twice as likely to be the victim of a hate crime?" I wonder... I wonder, "Should I hold my husband's hand while walking down the street?" "Should I wear a kippah (a head covering) in public?" "Should I hide who I am? A proud and out gay, Jewish man". My fear continues, thinking that if Rose Millinger, a 97 year old grandmother, who was alive during the atrocities of the Holocaust, only to be murdered in her synagogue, in the United States, on Shabbat for the sole reason of being Jewish, is not safe, who is?

These are the thoughts that have been cannot make this promise, but I can promise we must show up. This is what my communities do, and what we have to do to continue on. Despite every tragedy that has occurred, we have shown up - to mourn together, and to love each other.

This leads me to another date that I will remember forever: Monday, October 29, 2018, when more than 1,200 people of all faiths, ethnicities, and identities, lovingly embraced the Sacramento Jewish community in solidarity as we memorialized the 11 victims who were gunned down at Tree of Life. I will remember this date when I begin to wonder, "Am I, a gay Jewish man, alone?" I will remember this date as a reminder that I need not wonder any longer.

But I am just one person, and I cannot rest on the comfort that has been shown to me, and parts of my duel-communities. Others still feel alone and it is our job to show up for them. For the Trans community, and specifically the Trans people of color community.

For the 49 murdered in Orlando, the 11 gun downed in Pittsburg and the 51 Transgender lives that were violently ended since 2017, I pray that their memories always be for a blessing.

Out & About With Matt by Matthew Burlingame

The leftover Halloween candy is a mere memory, Election Day for better or worse has come and gone, and Thanksgiving is just two weeks away. So begins the season of family (chosen or otherwise) togetherness, personal reflection, and good will toward others.

Nov. 9 is a perfect time to start thinking of those in need this year as the Outword "Liquid Therapy" Happy Hour becomes a food drive for the LGBT Center's Q-Spot. Come get your drink on and bring with you items such as Top Ramen, cans of chili, pasta sauce, individual bags of chips, other nonperishable items and gift cards to Target, Grocery Outlet and Domino's Pizza. The special event will take place 5:30-7:30 p.m. at Badlands, 2003 K St.

Also at Badlands this month is the Rainbow Chamber's Nov. 20 networking mixer. Mingle with business owners and professionals from throughout the Sacramento region from 6-8 p.m. Rainbowchamber.com

Sacramento's favorite outside ice rink will once again play host to Drag Queens On Ice on Nov. 15 from 6 - 9 p.m. Each year, Outword chooses three charities to benefit from the event and 100% of the door cover goes to your choice of the three charities. This year, the charities are Front Street Animal Clinic, NorCal AIDS Cycle and CGNIE.

On Saturday, Nov. 10 at 10 a.m., join the #StillHere Capitol March & Rally for Trans Justice, The rally will begin at the Chyna Gibson mural behind the Lavender Library before marching to the State Capitol Building at 1315 I St. Marchers will carry 20+ tombstones bearing the names of trans people who have been murdered in 2018 as well as giant crosses on their backs. Holiday Shopping at SMF! Last- Minute Post-Security Gifts

s we enter the bustling holiday travel season, make sure you are aware of TSA regulations around bringing gifts and homemade treats in your luggage. Some basics include:

- Feel free to bring gifts but keep them UNWRAPPED.
- Baked goods are allowed, including pies, but it is recommended in your CARRY-ON luggage, not in the checked luggage.
- For a complete list of TSA travel recommendations visit www.smf.aero.

If you'd rather just pick up a fun gift for those family members you are visiting or a last-minute stocking stuffer for someone special, look no further than our post-TSA security retailers! Many of these great finds are great for you to splurge on yourself to make your travels even more comfortable. We found some gems on a recent afternoon checking out the brand new stock at some of the airport's shops:

• InMotion Bluetooth speakers and headphones in all sizes, colors

- External Memory for the iPhone will allow you to capture all those memories.
- Popsockets are the perfect stocking stuffer which turns your phone into a movie theatre on the tray table.
- · Visions of Eden and Irwin Pearl
- Beautiful leather journals for the aspiring writer.
- FitKicks comfy slippers with a non-slip bottom.
 - Tea supplies and unique mugs.
- Gorgeous jewelry unique artistic pieces in all metals, colors and styles.
 - · Great local wines from Vino Volo.
- Unique items for golfers at the PGA Tour store.
 - · And much more!

CURRENT AND 10 YEAR WINNER OF THE SACRAMENTO A-LIST

Xmas Comes Early At "Taylor Mac's Holiday Sauce" by Chris Narloch

If you missed the great Taylor Mac's recent appearance on "The Late Show with Stephen Colbert," YouTube it and experience the most spectacular, gender-bending talent at work in the theater today.

Wearing an eye-popping costume by the visionary designer Machine Dazzle, and singing Patti Smith's "People Have The Power" as a corrective to the Trump administration, Mac concluded his/her performance by making out with a male member of hir band and rolling around on the floor.

S(he) was as unforgettable as ever, and I am thrilled to report that Mac will usher in the season early this year with the Bay Area premiere at San Francisco's Curran of "Taylor Mac's Holiday Sauce," which was conceived, written, performed, co-directed, and co-produced by Mac, the remarkable actor, playwright, director, producer, and singer-songwriter behind such theatrical extravaganzas as "The Lily's Revenge" and "A 24-Decade History of Popular Music."

Celebrating the holiday season in all of its dysfunction, "Taylor Mac's Holiday Sauce" presents Christmas as calamity and reframes the songs you love and the holidays you hate.

Whatever this brilliant, cross-dressing performance artist has up hir colorful sleeve will be fab-u-lous, and I recommend getting tickets immediately for the too-brief engagement of "Taylor Mac's Holiday Sauce," which performs at the Curran Theatre Nov. 21 – Dec. 1, 2018. Cirque du Soleil's "Volta" Set To Soar In S.F.

Area opens in mid-November, and its inspiring message of empowerment and independence should resonate with audiences of every persuasion, and particularly the gay community.

Energetic, urban and contemporary, "Volta" is a captivating voyage of discovery that showcases never-before-seen-under-the-Big-Top acrobatics in a visually striking world.

Driven by a stirring melodic score and inspired in part by the adventurous spirit that fuels the culture of street sports, "Volta" is about finding yourself and unveiling your personal powers.

"Volta" is also a story of transformation. It is about being true to oneself, fulfilling one's true potential, and recognizing one's own power to make it possible. Ultimate freedom comes with self-acceptance, and with liberation from the judgment of others.

"Volta" will perform under the Big Top at AT&T Park in San Francisco from Nov. 15, 2018 – February 3, 2019. Visit www.cirquedusoleil.com/volta.

Sacramento Trans Bodybuilder Cody Harman Is "Man Made"

In commemoration of Transgender Awareness Week this November, BENT Film Festival and PRISM-Q LGBT and Allies Resource Center, are presenting two film screenings of "Man Made," an incredibly powerful feature-length documentary tracing the varied lives of four trans masculine individuals, as they prepare to step on stage at the only all-trans bodybuilding competition in the world.

"Man Made" takes us into the heart of transgender male (FTM) culture, revealing unexpected truths about gender, masculinity, humanity and love.

Four trans men (who, like the film's director, were born and raised female) take a variety of life paths toward stepping on stage at Atlanta, GA's Trans FitCon, the only all-transgender bodybuilding competition in the world.

"Man Made" is a character-driven, intimate, and riveting verité-style documentary film, but also a unique social justice narrative. It speaks to the ways in which we all choose to define and reshape ourselves, both figuratively and literally.

"Man Made" will be screened twice, once at the Crocker Art Museum in Sacramento, on Thursday, November 15, at 6:30 p.m., and again at The State Theatre in Auburn, on Saturday, November 17, at 1:00 p.m.

Both screenings will be followed by a discussion with chef, coach, and bodybuilding competitor Cody Harman, and with Gender Health Center Community Outreach Director and Bent Film Festival Board Member Rachael Hudson.

Tickets are $10 and can be purchased at https://bentfilmfest.org.

Rupert Everett: The Outword Interview

The first time I fell in love with Rupert Everett, in 1984, I was in college and his debut feature film, "Another Country," came out in theaters. Everett was near my age, and he was so incredibly beautiful in the movie (playing a gay student who becomes a spy) that I could hardly believe my eyes.

The second time I fell head over heels for Everett, in 1997, he was playing gay again, as the hilarious BFF of Julia Roberts' character in "My Best Friend's Wedding." (Audiences, gay and straight, male and female, seemed to fall head over heels for Everett in that movie as well.)

Now, Everett's career has come full circle, and he has taken on perhaps his most daunting role yet: writing, directing and starring in an acclaimed new big screen biopic about one of the pillars in queer history - the late, great writer Oscar Entitled "The Happy Prince," the film is a heartbreaking portrait of Wilde's highs and lows, and Rupert Everett gives a towering, Oscargrowing up not knowing about what we went through with AIDS and before that Stonewall, and going all the way back to Wilde, who is really the beginning of the gay liberation movement. We're all walking in his footsteps in a way. Homosexuality wasn't even a word before Wilde's time.

That historical context can be empowering, right?

Oh yes. Rather than a sense of fury or defeat and negativity, I want people to be moved and inspired by Wilde's life. There was certainly tragedy there, but it was because Wilde refused to conform to society's expectations. He was quite a survivor and a fighter. So I don't see him as a tragic figure but as a heroic one, ultimately, and his pardon someone for it is insulting really.

This wasn't your first brush with Oscar Wilde on screen, Rupert. You acted in movie versions of "An Ideal Husband" and also "The Importance of Being Earnest." Did that help you with the new film?

Sure. Having spoken his dialogue before definitely helped in playing him. As he became more successful, Wilde rose in society, but then there was this side of him that liked to have rent boys and petty criminals around, and they became a sort of family for him after his downfall.

I realized watching the film that I didn't know as much about Wilde as I thought I did, with respect to the character of his friend (and ultimately his literary agent) who was absolutely devoted to him.

Right. That for me was the true love of Wilde's life, although he may not have realized it until it was too late, but everyone always talks about his obsession with Lord Alfred Douglas instead. So I wanted to give Robbie Ross his due because he actually introduced Wilde to sex with men and stayed by him and loved him always. That was real love, but Wilde didn't notice it until very worthy performance in it.

I spoke with the 59-year-old actor by phone recently, and he had a great deal to say about Wilde and the movie. Read on for excerpts from that interview.

Rupert, it struck me while watching your film how much we need these larger than life figures in LGBTQ history to be kept alive for new generations that are growing up with the option of gay marriage and much more acceptance than was the reality during the last half of the 19th century, when Oscar Wilde was alive. Was that one of the reasons you wanted his story to be told again?

Absolutely. History has just been elbowed out of the way, to some extent, and I think for my community, the LGBTO community, it's vital to know why we are where we are. It's shocking to me that young gay people are highs were as big as his lows.

We find out before the end credits to your film that it was only just last year that Wilde was pardoned for his crimes. I was shocked to learn that.

Well, it's maddening to me in a different way, because there is no crime so why do we need a pardon? Being gay shouldn't be considered a crime, and so to

I never married, but I live with someone in the west country of England.

See A Movie Downtown This November by Chris Narloch

y three favorite Sacramento cinemas are downtown, and they all have not-to-be-missed movies playing this month, to entertain us as the days get colder and the next Oscar race starts to heat up.

The Tower

If you enjoy Melissa McCarthy's work – and even if you don't – you might be surprised by how good she is in her new dramatic feature, "Can You Ever Forgive Me?" which is getting some serious Oscar buzz.

McCarthy is subtle and superb in that film as Lee Israel, a real-life journalist and biographer who resorted to selling forged letters (that she claimed were written by original Sundance Kid playing a charming bank robber who escapes from San Quentin at age 70 to continue his life of crime.

Check current listings for Sacramento's Tower Theatre at www.readingcinemasus.com/tower.

The Esquire IMAX

Two upcoming films look to be winners at Sacramento's IMAX Theatre on K Street: the revisionist horror fantasy "Overlord" and the famous folks) in order to make money after her writing career stalled.

As wary friends and co-conspirators, McCarthy and Richard E. Grant are terrific together, playing two lonely New Yorkers who bond with each other while breaking the law.

Also at the Tower, the edge-of-your-seat-suspenseful mountain climbing movie "Free Solo" will have adrenaline junkies and film fans in hog heaven, as Sacramento's own Alex Honnold completes the first free solo climb of El Capitan's 3,000-foot vertical rock face at Yosemite National Park.

Finally, if they are still playing at Tower (or anywhere else in town) by the time you read this, "Beautiful Boy" and "The Old Man & the Gun" both contain Oscar-worthy work by their lead actors, Timothee Chalamet and Robert Redford, respectively.

Chalamet is realistically heartbreaking in "Beautiful Boy" as a suburban college student whose father (Steve Carell) tries desperately to help his son survive a drug addiction.

Robert Redford, on the other hand, gives a nicely laid-back movie star performance in "The Old Man & the Gun" which has the latest J.K. Rowling-penned flick, "Fantastic Beasts: The Crimes of Grindelwald."

Just when you think you've seen it all before, a movie like "Overlord" comes along, which finds American paratroopers battling an army of the undead after they drop into a Nazi-occupied village. Opens Nov. 9.

More family-friendly than "Overlord," the sequel to the first "Fantastic Beasts" film has young Albus Dumbledore (Jude Law) and Newt Scamander team up in an effort to thwart Grindelwald's (Johnny Depp) plans to raise pure blood wizards to rule over all non-magical beings. Opens Nov. 16.

For more information and to purchase advance tickets, go to www.imax.com/theatres/esquire-imax.

The Crest

There are many cool live shows playing at this historic midtown movie palace in November, but the Crest also managed to squeeze in Terry Gilliam's "Brazil," the director's unique 1985 film, which is half socio-political satire and half fantasy adventure. See it on the big screen on Sunday, Nov. 11. Visit www.crestsacramento.com.

Puppy Love That Will Leave You Panting

othing is sweeter than big, beautiful puppy eyes staring at you. Well, how about a buff guy with bulging biceps holding the pooch?

"Bullies and Biceps" brings us images that touch our hearts...and get our hearts racing. The 2019 calendar, shot by renowned photographer Mike Ruiz, features some of the most popular fitness models along with adorable pit bull pups looking for their forever homes (the dogs...not the guys). The men featured in "Bullies and Biceps" include Bryan Richards, Michael Dean, Nick Topel and cover-model Casey Christopher.

Crew, a pet rescue specializing in rehabbing pit bulls and finding them homes. The organization partners with city shelters around the country and overseas.
